Governor of said State
hereby officially recognizes

Financial Aid Awareness Month
February 2010

The future successes of our young people depend on the availability of quality, accessible educational opportunities. The devoted work that student financial aid administrators put forth on a daily basis ensures that countless prospective students can attain funding that meets their fiscal needs.

Therefore, I, Ted Strickland, Governor of Ohio, recognize February as "Financial Aid Awareness Month" to help promote the availability of aid to qualified students and to increase the familiarity of financial aid to those who seek postsecondary education.

The Ohio Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators' annual "College Goal Sunday" event has provided over 14,000 Ohioans with assistance to overcome fiscal barriers to gain access to a higher education, and I extol their dedicated efforts. The expanded access to educational opportunities that the Ohio Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators has given many students has helped make Ohio a better place to live.

On this first day of February 2010
